

In the event that the National Geospatial-Intelligence College is unable to offer training at its facilities, the inclement weather policies listed below will apply.

The National Geospatial-Intelligence College (NGC), as a federal entity, and follows OPM guidelines during an inclement weather situation. Exceptions for training shall occur for employees who perform emergency work involving the safety of human life or the protection of property performing certain types of excepted work. In accordance with the OPM and OMB memorandums, the following guidelines are established for students attending training courses at NGC.

Category I-If a class is scheduled for 1-3 days, students may not miss any days. If the federal government closes for one day due to inclement weather, the 1-3 day class will be cancelled and students will need to reschedule for a future class.

Category II-If a class is scheduled for 4-5 days, students may only miss one day due to government closure. If the federal government closes for one day, the 4-5 day class will resume the following day if there is another day(s) left on the schedule. If the government is closed on the final day of class, students will not need to make that day up and they will still receive credit for the class. If the government is closed for a second day of class, the class will be cancelled and students will need to reschedule for a future class.

Category III-If a class is scheduled for 6-10 days, students may only miss two days due to government closure. If the federal government closes for two days, the 6-10 day class shall resume the following day if there is another day(s) left on the schedule. If the government is closed on the final two days of class, students will not need to make those days up and they will still receive credit for the class. If the government is closed for a third day of class, the class will be cancelled and students will need to reschedule for a future class.
