Transparency, industry engagement emphasis of NGA at Aspen Security Forum

SPRINGFIELD, Va. — National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency Director Robert Cardillo will highlight the agency's push toward greater transparency, its commitment to stronger global partnerships and the commercial-imagery revolution during a panel at the Aspen Security Forum in Aspen, Colorado, July 24.

The national security panel, scheduled to begin at 1:45 p.m. MT, also includes David Cohen, deputy director, CIA, and Nicholas Rasmussen, director, National Counterterrorism Center.

Brian Ross, ABC News chief investigative correspondent, will moderate the panel and facilitate a question-and-answer segment discussing current national security issues.

The Aspen Security Forum, July 22-25, is an annual summer gathering of top-level present and former government officials from national security agencies, industry leaders, leading thinkers, nationally noted print and broadcast journalists, and concerned citizens.
