NGA director to address 2015 USGIF GEOINT Symposium

SPRINGFIELD, Virginia — The director of the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency is scheduled to address the U.S. Geospatial Intelligence Foundation GEOINT 2015 Symposium at the Walter E. Washington Convention Center in Washington June 23 from 10:15 to 10:45 a.m.

Robert Cardillo, who has led the intelligence agency's unprecedented foray into the unclassified operation environment, will discuss the importance of agency transparency and continued collaboration with open sources in keeping with the symposium's theme, "Opening the Aperture: Charting New Paths."

The June 22-25 event will mark the first time the symposium has been held in the nation's capital, according to the USGIF.

An afternoon news conference is planned for 1:30, in which Cardillo will be available to answer questions from members of the media in attendance.

To schedule interviews or for additional inquiries, please contact NGA chief of media relations Don Kerr, 703-600-9248 or donald.b.kerr@nga.mil.

Visit the USGIF GEOINT 2015 Symposium website for more information about the event.
