NGA releases new acquisition strategy

SPRINGFIELD, Va. — The National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency released its 2016 enterprise acquisition strategy, detailing a leaner process and new methods for technology and innovative contracting.

Elements of the strategy also include leveraging open source data, aligning efforts to NGA's corporate strategy, and collaborating with customers and industry partners from beginning to end.

"Today's world requires us to meet mission demand faster than ever before," said Karen Hayes-Ryan, NGA component acquisition executive. "We must take this opportunity to develop an elite acquisition workforce in support of NGA and our mission now and well into the future."
